ASTATULA — The water quality in the Lake Harris chain has been improving over the last few years and it's about to get a boost.

This summer, the Lake County Water Authority will begin construction on the Nutrient Reduction Facility (NuRF Project) to remove phosphorous from water coming from Lake Apopka.

"Any improvement to water quality is going to immediately translate into a more desirable destination for tourist and local tax-payers," Michael Perry, executive director of the Lake County Water Authority said.
